Mark Volponi has served with USX Federal Credit Union in Cranberry Township, Pa., since 2005. Prior to his current role as president and chief executive officer, he held titles as the vice president of finance, chief financial officer and executive vice president for the credit union. He also spent many years in community banking, serving as chief financial officer for Slippery Rock Financial Corporation and its wholly-owned subsidiary bank, The First National Bank of Slippery Rock.

In addition to these roles, he has also served in several volunteer positions for Vizo Financial and the former Mid-Atlantic Corporate since 2013, including the supervisory committees for both entities. He's been an active member of the Corporate's board of directors and ALCO since 2020. Mr. Volponi also served as a member of Lions Club International from 1995 to 2005.

Mr. Volponi has a Bachelor of Science degree in business administration with a concentration in accounting from Clarion University, Clarion, Pa. He's also an accounting graduate of the ABA Stonier Graduate School of Banking from the University of Delaware and has completed several courses through the American Bankers Association and CUES.

Mr. Volponi credits his long career in the credit union and community banking industries, as well as his time with Vizo Financial's board of directors and various committees, with providing him the experience needed to address challenges credit unions face in their day-to-day operations amid today's competitive landscape. He hopes to "be a voice for natural person credit unions in the development of new technologies, products and services that will continue the advancement of the credit union movement."
