

Opening credits: Music plays in the background. A man with a football helmet and Harry Potter robe is sitting at a desk covered in random objects with a cardboard cut-out of Justin Bieber behind him while another man looks in the office window from the outside. A man is in a studio dancing while another man is sitting in a chair playing guitar. A man is walking around a building while talking to the camera. A man is walking in front of a green screen in a studio. A man is riding a rocking horse outside while waving a cowboy hat. A man is sitting at a poker table surrounded by stuffed animals and angrily throws down his hand of cards onto the table. A man sitting on a red chair in an office while laughing. A man is laughing at a poker table surrounded by stuffed animals. A man is sitting at a desk with a football helmet on and laughing while surrounded by random objects and cardboard cut-out of Justin Bieber behind him. A man is on a highway next to a brick building, pine trees and a road sign while jumping up and down holding a cardboard sign that reads Watch ATC. White words appear on the screen that read 'Around the Corporate with Rodney May'. Screen fades to black.

Black screen with white words that read, "The Finale Episode"

Rodney: Can you believe all this started with a simple recurring article in a newsletter now after more than a decade and a lot of laughs it's finally time to hang up my many hats and costumes and say goodbye to ATC.

Rodney: Over the years. I made a lot of memories through ATC. I had the privilege of trying my hand at new careers like being a rapper. Shout out to my inspiration Flavor Flav and then there was a time I got to be the football coach. Oh man. That was a childhood dream come true. I've gotten a feature my co-workers and okay, I'll say it, friends. Who wouldn't be proud to stand beside Houser in this getup?

Rodney: The interviews I've conducted open my eyes to just how funny my colleagues can be. I'll never forget the time Tim and I couldn't stop laughing over the word pizza. I still laugh when I see pizza now.

Rodney: I really got to show off my love of good music and share it with my team. That was an awesome road trip especially because I got to control the radio. And of course, I got to defend my title as ATC host more than once. Joe may always have his easel and special markers, but he never did succeed in taking my place. Good try though, Joe.

Rodney: It's bittersweet when things come to an end, but this is life. I've had my fun and pleasure of bringing all my credit union family with me. It's been a wild ride and I wouldn't have it any other way. Sharing everything about the corporate, being a source of entertainment and really just enjoying the making of each episode. I hold the entire experience near and dear to my heart even as the time to say goodbye gets closer. But don't think just because I won't be on your screen anymore I won't be around. Maybe you'll finally see me on an episode of Big Brother. Who knows, maybe I'll even toy with the idea of an ATC farewell tour someday, you know, like Kiss does every couple years. But ultimately, I'll be here alongside my fellow Vizo Financial employees working to serve your credit union.

Rodney: Hi, Steve.

Steve: Hey, Rodney. How you doing, man? I know it's hard to let go.

Rodney: I'm fine. I'm just trying to figure out how to get out of this place. I've been to like 12 doors down the elevator where the heck's the exit?

Steve: It's right there.

Rodney: Oh, yeah. Thanks bud.

Steve: Yeah, you bet. You know Rod, ATC would have never been successful without me.

Rodney: Yeah, right. How do you figure?

Steve: What do you mean? You didn't even know where the door was!

Rodney: At least I know my line.

Steve What line?

Rodney: Yeah for the last time I'm saying it. Here's what's happening ATC.

[music playing]

A light blue screen appears with white lettering that reads, 'What's Happening ATC?' Letters appear upside down then flip to right side up. A small version of Rodney wearing a blue collared shirt and brown dress pants and dress shoes drops down from the top of the screen onto the question mark.

Rodney is sitting in front of a pale blue screen with white lettering that reads, 'Around the Corporate'. A wooden column is in the background to the left.

Rodney: Sign up to attend our November 14th webinar titled Putting Credit Union Risks and Security in the Hot Seat. Our panel will include the following Vizo Financial staff members; John Cuneo, VP information security and two of our information security analysts Mike Bechtle and Keeley Hartman. This session will cover security issues impacting the credit union industry. They'll provide tips on protecting your financial institution and answer your security and risk related questions. Register now at vfccu.org. In the coming weeks, please look for our annual Q9 survey email. This very quick to complete survey gives you the opportunity to tell us how we are doing. When I come back, I'll have my final interview.
